Sir:

Having read neither of your books on the Kennedy assassination, I have no way of knowing what your conclusions are on this episode. I have merely started Whitewash II.

Even so, I feel a strong urge to recommend another book to you, one that has some bearing on this horrible case. It is Avro Manhattan's Catholic Power Today.* The whole book is chilling, but especially Chapter 14 and the Viet Nam situation.

Since John Foster Dulles figures so strongly in this chapter, and since his brother Allen was in on the Warren Report, there is a connection. If I read this chapter correctly, Diem was too Catholic for the Pope, and Kennedy was not Catholic enough to suit the American hierarchy in the Viet Nam situation.

You will have to excuse the fact that the name below is phoney. I am not interested in publicity, but I am as concerned as any other non-entity about justice being done in this tragic affair.

Cordially yours,

Drury Maynor
